Near Losing a Favorite Canine, All acquaintances of Congressman Moody know of his fondness for dogs, and it is generally reputed that there is nothing which he more admires than a well trained hunter, but his friends here were not aware that a few days prior to his departure for Washington he attempted to deprive the editor of the Enterprise Bulletin of a highly tressured, lemon-colored cur. How ever the editor of that paper gives the congressman away. He says:

"Just before boarding the train Portland to come to Enterprise, we placed in the hands of the baggage master a thoroughbred lemon-colore pointer dog with instructions to givhim the best of care to La Grande where we changed cars to Eigin. At the Dalles we were ruthlessly awak ened by one of the brakemen, who is formed us that a gentleman, accompan ied by some friends, was endeavoring to obtain our dog from the baggage master. We hurried forward and found the party telking loudly and vehicle mently to the baggage-master and demanding that the dog be handed over to him. We endeavored to explain but not until the dog recognized us as his master would the gentleman con sider the matter. At this point explanation followed, and we learned that gentlemen had received information by telegram that a lemon-colored dog had been sent to him that evening by Portland friends. We also learned that the gentleman was none other than Hon. Malcolm Moody, congressman from the second district; and right there it dawned upon us that our democratic friends in Portland, who had bid us adieu at the depot, had telegraphed the congressman that a dog of that description had been sent to him by his republican admirers of Multnomah county. TOOUES MADE AT HOME.

Bits of Velvet, Feathers and Tulle.

Here are a few half-season toques that, with a little ingenuity, odd bits velvet, tulle and feathers, can be mouse-colored velvet, all wrinkled horilady got into the stage in violation of zontally and resting against the hair, is crossed in front by a loosely draped knot in light gray satin. The height of the knot, which puffs up above the velvet folds in front, holds down two stuffed guinea fowl feathers that circle flatly back over the smooth velvet crown. It is an exceedingly pretty design, suitable to accompany a tailormade gown, and is, as may be imagined, very easily executed. Another coquettish little headdres of pansy blue velvet, drawn to the front in two sharp reveres. Over the flaring back reveres is a high-lifted, irregular bow, knotted from a bias piece of lavender taffeta, the tenter of the knot being a twist of pansy blue velvet. Two fancy pearl hatpins, with filigree mounting, are stuck jauntily in the front of the bow. The arrangement of the pins is nail-fashion, as though they served to tack the bow to the bonnet An outline and twist about the small body of the toque are made of a fine ruching of lavender mousseline de Matching a street gown, out of the cloth of which it is made, is a poppy-red toque, artfully draped and raised at the left side with a knot of velvet pop-pies, with seedy black centers. Above the poppies is an aggressive spreading of four lively red wings. An ornament of cut jet is allowed to show vaguely among the poppies. Black tulle is effectively combined on a toque frame with a rolling twist of black velvet The tulle has an added charm if it be first jet-spangled. The crown is filled in with loosely folded tulle, while a wide rope twist of velvet forms the rim. The roll is broken near the front by a subtly wound knot of tulle that forms a base for short jetted aigrettes. Behind the aigrettes are airy loops of tulle that are given a crisp appearance by being invisibly wired. Circular flats of soft felt are easily draped and twisted into artistic toques. Fine violet colored felt is effectively used in a prettily crushed toque, ornamented at the left side with an enormous knot of very pale "Parma violet" velvet, into which two violet colored quills sprinkled with jet are stuck at angles. The center of the knot is a jeweled ornament. At the back two ound bunches of violets rest against Strikingly odd is a toque made en irely of ostrich tips and plumes. The foundation is a little flat, covered with hort, eurly ostrich trimming. Around he crown are dozens of tiny curled tips. This roll of tips curves down in cabbage rosette of turquoise blue velvet, centered on a pearl ornament. Back from the rosette a single long black plume curves gracefully, resting half against the hair.—Chicago Times-

PATRIOTISM IN GERMANY. The Pleasant Way in Which

Youth in School.

In Germany they teach patriotism in the popular schools: in England we do not-at any rate, not officially, says the Pall Mail Cazette. in Germany the kaiser's birthday, the anniversary of Sedan, and other national landmarks are celebrated in the national schools. They have feasts and music and excursions; but the dalldren have kept cleary before their eyes the reason for their ejoicings. Indeed, the law impresses pon parents and children that all volintary absence from these school feasts is an offense. There were parents who kept their children back, especially rom the Sedan commemoration, and this on conscientious grounds. But now no longer; "for," says the magistrate. "any, unexcused absence from patriotic festivale established by the school shall be considered a voluntary non-attendance, and inspectors, teachers and the

Let us imagine the astonishment of the English child if he were told that he was to have a holiday and a fete for the cake of some great event in our own history. But Germany has these patriatic school feasts, and France the emblem of the republic in every schoolroom, because they actually imagine the patriot is made as well

Such a lengthy engagement of itself shows clearly that she has been a success in her occupation. So far as is known she is the only living woman who travels for a lumber house. In the summer of 892 Miss Shannon was visiting in Minneapolis. She came in contact with embers of large lumber firms, and they, being impressed with her good sense and business ability, offered her a place as traveling representative. She consulted her parents and accepted the position. Miss Shannon is a petite blond. She is modest and unassun but a good conversationalist. She dresses modestly and carries very little baggage. f the men who were prominent in the istory of Oregon. Born in Wayland, fass., on May 21, 1830, he acquired a usiness education in his native state, but being energetic to build for himself fortune in the then almost unknown Vest, migrated to California in 1851. He found employment in a large merantile house in San Francisco, remain ne until '56, then went to Portland, here he worked for a year, removing rom there to The Dalles in '57 and ngaged in the mercantile business ith his brother Frank, under the firm ame of Balbwin Bros., which firm oon become well known in business ircles throughout the Northwest, they having, besides their store here, extenive establishments at Walla Walla and Lewiston. In all of these places heir business flourished, and they were at one time one of the leading mercan ile firms in the upper country. In 1874 Mr. Baldwin closed up most of his business interests here and returned to his birthplace where in June of that year he was married to Miss Elen Da mon. They came to California to reside, while Mr Baldwin continued his business at Lewiston and Walla Walla until 1879. In 1883 with his family he again came to The Dalles and has made this his home ever since, a portion of the time being engaged in merchandising, but of late years has not been in any active business. To Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin were born five children, only two of whom are living-Edward D. and Martha K. Besides his wife and two children, he eaves one brother and a nephew and lece residing in Walla Walla.

During his business career Mr. Bald win was an energetic public spirited man, taking a deep interest in educational affairs, and though not a memper of any church institutions, he gave them both his moral and financial support. He was a member of the Oregon Pioneer Association, and though his leath another honored one is stricken

"FRONT" IN WASHINGTON. Gall Who Expect the Guests to Do Part of Their Work. The colored "front" of the Washington hotel is like no other hotel hall boy, white or black, in the United States. He doesn't hesitate to ask the guests to do part of his work. Old stagers at these hotels do not appear to think it strange, but folks accustomed to hotels in other parts of the country are at first rather surprised at the requests made of them by the colored "front" of the Washingon hotels. This is the style of it: "Goin' to your room, sir?" asks 'front" with card and tray as a guest is about to step into the elevator.

"Yes." And then "front," handing the card, says: "Will you tap on Mr. Honeycomb's door and tell him this gemman is downstairs and wants to see him?" Your room is 61, and "front" knowe it,

The northerner at first is a bit taken back, but he soon becomes accustomed to the situation and grins at the audacity of the request. Others tell the colored "front" to go to the devil, and so on. The colored "front" doesn't mean any disrespect. It is only his way of trying to shuffle his work on to others.

"The queerest tombstone I ever saw was in Hays City," said a man who has known Kansas for a good many years, and during the times when the short grass sections were, as easterners say, wild and woolly," lived in Hays City, says the Topeka State Journal.

"It was years ago, when 'Boot Hill.' the cemetery where men who fell with their boots on were buried, was in the height of its glory and was growing rapidly. Well, to make a long story short, one of the wearers of long boots, revolvers, and bowie knives was killed one day, and as in all such cases he was promptly buried. As soon as the coroner gave as the reason he was killed that he was 'careless and did not have his weapons on,' he was carried right out to Boot Hill and buried.

"Where is the tombstone? He ought to have something,' said one of the party. All the boards that were kept for such use had been used, so a member of the party rustled around and came across a railroad signboard abou two inches thick that had the corner cut off and looked much like a headboard. It was painted white and seeme to be just the thing. The name of the Hood's Pills owner of that six feet of earth was painted on the board and it was set up and not till then was it noticed that there was something on the other side. There it was, in big black letters that could be read for a quarter of a mile: Look Out for the Cars."
